The Carpenter's Son

BY SHERIAN WILLS

My dad has a saying that goes something like this: "I once had some chickens I fed sawdust. The hen laid eggs and sat on them to keep them warm. But as the chicks hatched, I discovered that they all had cedar chests and wooden legs!"

Well, I suppose because of my dad's great love of wood-working, if they ever took an X-ray of him they'd find that he too has a cedar chest and wooden legs.

Lynwood E. Bayne, born the son of a carpenter, followed in his father's footsteps from an early age. He began his career as a laborer and worked his way up the ranks to the position of construction superintendent.

Just as an artist with fine brushstrokes paints a landscape across the canvas, my dad, as overseer of construction, left his marks etched on the skyline of the Roanoke Valley in Virginia. Some of his more notable accomplishments include Towers Mall Shopping Center, the downtown Dominion Bank building (now called First Union), and the 1971 addition to the Roanoke Memorial Hospital.

Michelangelo once replied, when asked why he was dragging a piece of marble through town, "Because there's an angel in there trying to get out." My dad has the same love affair with woods. Give him a piece of warm pink oak, dark rich walnut, or smooth-grained birch, and he sees a piece of furniture or cabinetwork trying to escape.

Although his work has been noteworthy, I prefer to think of my dad for his devotion to God and family—for his unwavering loyalty and support (both financially and emotionally) to us his children, his grandchildren, and now his great-grandchildren.

My dad instilled in me the love of the written word, for which I will ever be grateful. My fondest childhood memory is that of snuggling on the couch beside him as he read stories to me from a set of tattered old encyclopedias, Ideals magazines, or a book of poetry.

When I announced my secret desire (almost a half century later) to become a writer, my dad took me seriously. He bolstered my sinking morale, and when I received one rejection slip after another, he encouraged me to keep writing. Then he rejoiced with me when at last I made my first sale.

More than that, however, I'm thankful for his quiet example of faith in God. He does not preach his religion; he lives it. My dad has never been a church elder; neither has he spoken from the pulpit. Other than his service as deacon, most of his contributions have been done quietly behind the scenes—janitorial work, mowing and trimming bushes, repair jobs, and carpentry for the Roanoke Memorial Avenue church, its Community Services, and its school.

My dad has been a regular volunteer in the fruit program at Roanoke Adventist Preparatory School. He's helped unload the tractor trailers of fruit sold to help support the school. He's painted lines for parking and directed traffic for pickup. He's carried out the heavy cartons and loaded them into customers' vehicles, and he's delivered the fruit to the shut-ins and the elderly who were unable to pick up their orders.

Though he's now 84 years old, my dad hasn't retired from service. He's a deacon in the North Valley church, where he is now a member. Our new congregation meets in a rented church, but my dad's handiwork can be seen dotted around the church on any given Sabbath. He does work for our congregation, and has done carpentry for the denomination from which we rent. Dad is currently drawing potential building plans for our future church.

Cedar chest and wooden legs? Well, probably so. Not only was his earthly father a carpenter, but his heavenly Brother was one as well, for He worked in a carpenter shop in the little town of Nazareth almost 2,000 years ago. "He learned a trade, and with His own hands worked in the carpenter's shop with Joseph. . . . He was not willing to be defective, even in the handling of tools. He was perfect as a workman, as He was perfect in character."* So perhaps it's the sawdust that runs through my dad's veins that enables him to be, as Paul admonishes, "not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord" (Rom. 12:11). ■
